The Barque of St. Peter

We of course know, from all those fish emblems on the back of cars driving down the road, that the fish is a symbol the early Christians used to identify one another. [The Greek word symbolon meant half of a broken object, for example, a seal presented as a token of recognition. The broken parts were placed together to verify the bearer's identity. CCC 188]. So we see, sometimes a fish is more than a fish – words and ideas can mean symbolically more than the literal sense. In the same way sometimes a boat is more than a boat.

It is interesting to see that, even though Our Lord came to earth out of love for His people – to give example and save us from sin – He nevertheless does so by physically distancing Himself from these same people! Notice that, “While the crowd was pressing in on Jesus and listening to the Word of God”, Jesus gets into the boat belonging to Simon Peter and puts out a short distance from the shore. It is only then that “He sat down and taught the crowds from the boat”. The instrumentality of the boat makes it easier to deliver His message of salvation to the people. The distance from the people allowed Him to speak without being overwhelmed by crowds, and the water would carry His voice better than standing within the crowds (almost like a megaphone). Hence, Jesus uses a medium by which His mission could more effectively be accomplished in the midst of so great a crowd of people. He uses this medium, therefore, not to distance Himself from the people He loves, but to better reach out to them and help them. We should notice too that, the “medium” Jesus utilizes is not merely the instrumentality of the boat, but also that of the fisherman, who man the boat for Him.

The old-world word for boat is ‘barque’ [Old Italian barca, from Latin]. It was a carryover from the word for a double-ended boat, skiff, or barge used in the Mediterranean. In the Gospel this Sunday [Lk 5:1-11] we see that Jesus uses a boat for teaching and preaching to the crowds of people; He also uses the boat for catching fish, which undoubtedly feeds those same people as well. Hence, the boat is an instrument Our Lord uses to preach, teach, and nourish; Jesus uses a boat to sustain His people. In this sense, in the Scripture we read today, St. Peter's boat is truly a vessel of God's saving actions in the world. Our Lord utilizes the ‘Barque of St. Peter’ for His saving work for sinful humanity.

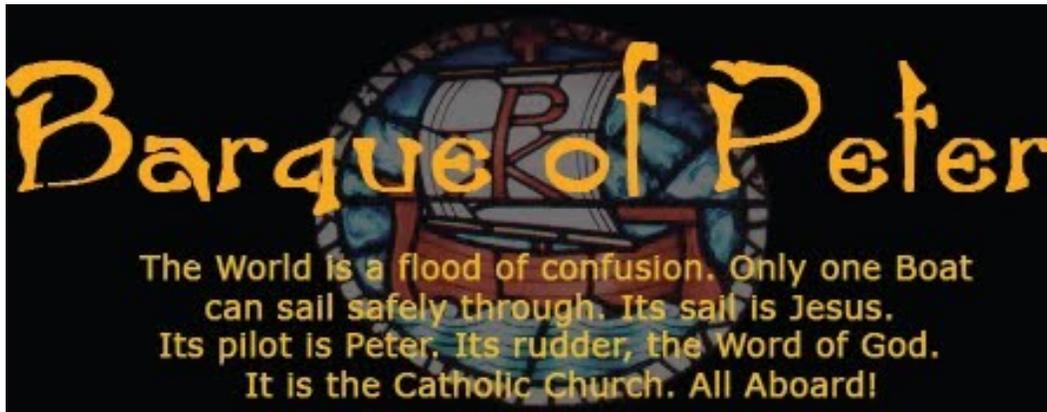

Perhaps this is the reason that a boat was the metaphor traditionally used by the early Christians to depict The Church of Christ; perhaps this is in relation to what we see in the Gospels. For instance, in the Gospel today: the boat is seen as the Church, Christ is the Captain giving direction, Peter, the obedient first mate; the nets are the Church's teachings seen as the Love of God, which in a sense ‘ensnares’ us. The fish are, as we have seen, the Christian people; the deep waters represent the world mission the Church pushes ahead towards. The ‘partners’ that were called to assist them with the nets, are the bishops and priests, religious and laity who co-operate with Peter. All this can be parsed out of the Gospel the Church places before us this Sunday. Is this viewpoint, however, ‘straining to see a gnat’ in the fog? Looking even deeper in Sacred Scripture we indeed see that it is not.

In the Gospel of St. John [21:3-11] we see yet another instance of the ‘Barque of Peter’. It is interesting to note here that, at both the beginning and the end of Our Lord's ministry, Jesus performs a miracle in relation to Peter's boat and a miraculous catch of fish in great number. In this instance, it is after the Resurrection. The Apostles, following St. Peter's lead, go fishing. The Lord then appears on the land and directs them to cast their nets, upon doing so they must labor to haul it in, for the sheer quantity of fish. At this miracle they recognize that, as “that disciple whom Jesus loved said to Peter, 'It is the Lord!'” [21:7]. It is recorded in Sacred Scripture that they “...hauled the net ashore, full of large fish, a hundred and fifty-three of them; and although there were so many, the net was not torn” [21:11]. Interestingly enough, I was told by a Redemptorist professor in the seminary that the number ‘153’ represented in the ancient Jewish world the least number of people that was necessary to establish a new Jewish synagogue – a new assembly or church. In this passage of Sacred Scripture, we again see that the “Barque of St. Peter” is the vessel through which Christ will operate in the world, especially after He ascends to His Father in Heaven. For this reason the ensuing “Feed My sheep” phrase is spoken personally to St. Peter as the Chief Shepherd of the Flock of Christ, The Church [21:15-19].

There are other examples of the “Barque of St. Peter” as being a symbol for the Church in scripture [Jn 6:16ff] and iconography. Perhaps this is seen too in the Old Testament ark of Noah that foreshadows St. Peter's New Testament boat as the means of salvation for all who enter therein. “The Lord said to Noah, 'Go into the ark, you and all your household, for I have seen that you are righteous before me in this generation'” [Gen 7:1]. And so it is that all those who would be righteous must enter into the ark of the New Covenant, which is the Church. In conclusion then, we see that, just as Christ uses the medium of the boat of Peter in the Gospel today not to distance Himself from His flock, but to better save them, so Christ uses the medium of The Catholic Church, the “Barque of St. Peter”, the medium by which Christ teaches, feeds, and saves, the people He loves.

The Prophecy of the Two Columns

St. John Bosco [† 1888] is known for prophetic dreams. His most famous dream is the Prophecy of the Two Columns. In his words, here is the dream:

"Try to picture yourselves with me on the seashore, or, better still, on an outlying cliff with no other land in sight. The vast expanse of water is covered with a formidable array of ships in battle formation, prows fitted with sharp spear-like beaks capable of breaking through any defense. All are heavily armed with cannons, incendiary bombs, and firearms of all sorts – even books – and are heading toward one stately ship, mightier than them all. As they try to close in, they try to ram it, set it afire, and cripple it as much as possible.

"This stately vessel is shielded by a flotilla escort. Winds and waves are with the enemy. In the midst of this endless sea, two solid columns, a short distance apart, soar high into the sky: one is surmounted by a statue of the Immaculate Virgin at whose feet a large inscription reads: "Help of Christians". The other column, far loftier and sturdier, supports a [Communion] Host of proportionate size and bears beneath it the inscription "Salvation of believers".

"The flagship commander – the Roman Pontiff [the Pope] – seeing the enemy's fury and his auxiliary ships very grave predicament, summons his captains to a conference. However, as they discuss their strategy, a furious storm breaks out and they must return to their ships. When the storm abates, the Pope again summons his captains as the flagship keeps on its course. But the storm rages again. Standing at the helm, the Pope strains every muscle to steer his ship between the two columns from whose summits hang many anchors and strong hooks linked to chains.

"The entire enemy fleet closes in to intercept and sink the flagship at all costs. They bombard it with everything they have: books and pamphlets, incendiary bombs, firearms, cannons. The battle rages ever more furious. Beaked prows ram the flagship again and again, but to no avail, as, unscathed and undaunted, it keeps on its course. At times a formidable ram splinters a gaping hole into its hull, but, immediately, a breeze from the two columns instantly seals the gash.

"Meanwhile, enemy cannons blow up, firearms and beaks fall to pieces, ships crack up and sink to the bottom. In blind fury the enemy takes to hand-to-hand combat, cursing and blaspheming. Suddenly the Pope falls, seriously wounded. He is instantly helped up but, struck down a second time, dies. A shout of victory rises from the enemy and wild rejoicing sweeps their ships. But no sooner is the Pope dead than another takes his place. The captains of the auxiliary ships elected him so quickly that the news of the Pope's death coincides with that of his successor's election. The enemy's self-assurance wanes.

"Breaking through all resistance, the new Pope steers his ship safely between the two columns and moors it to the two columns; first to the one surmounted by the Host, and then to the other, topped by the statue of the Virgin. At this point something unexpected happens. The enemy ships panic and disperse, colliding with and scuttling each other. Some auxiliary ships which had gallantly fought alongside their flagship are the first to tie up at the two columns. A great calm now covers the sea."

"Very grave trials await the Church. What we have suffered so far is almost nothing compared to what is going to happen. The enemies of the Church are symbolized by the ships which strive their utmost to sink the flagship. Only two things can save us: devotion to Mary and frequent Communion. Let us do our very best to use these two means and have others use them everywhere."

New Year Blessings,

Father Tim
